Magnetic Wristband

Ever worked under your layout with a mouthful of screws?

Ever knocked a bundle of track pins on to the carpet?

Ever dismantled an object to find that one or two nuts or bolts have disappeared?

What you need is a magnetic wristband!

I was recently given one as a belated Xmas present and find it very useful.

The strap uses Velcro strips so fits any wrist.

Inside its lining is a bunch of neodymium magnets.

The image shows me dropping an array of items (track pins, screws, bolts, capacitor, resistor and a small motor) where they are held fast even if I shake my arm.
